Driven by rural depopulation and demographic shifts, municipalities across Switzerland, Italy, Spain, and Portugal are actively funding relocation to revive local economies.

Chapter 2

The Crucial Distinction: Visa vs. Grant

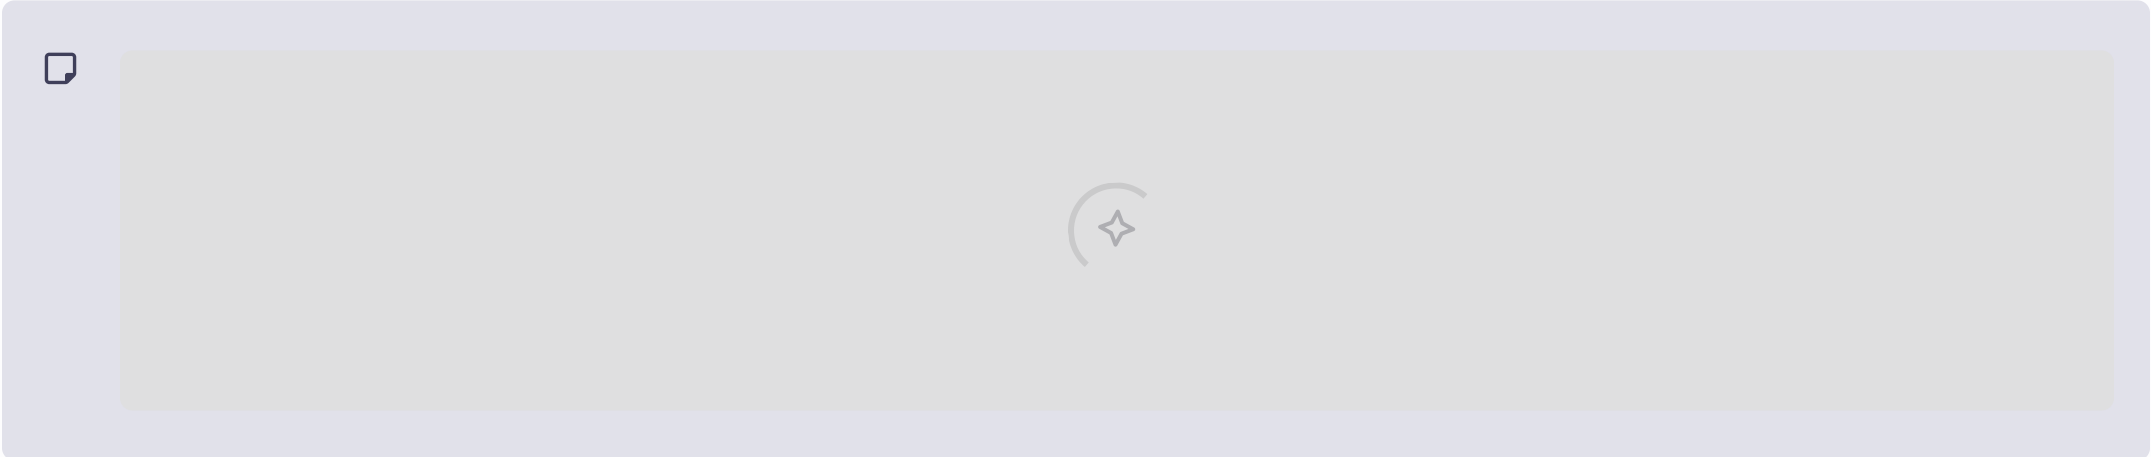

The most common trap for prospective applicants: a regional cash grant is not an entry visa. Financial incentives are issued by municipalities — immigration status is controlled exclusively by federal governments. You cannot collect a relocation grant on a tourist visa.

The Three-Step Legal Pathway

Visa approval and grant eligibility are governed by entirely separate legal frameworks. Executing this sequence in strict order is the only compliant path to claiming your financial incentive.

The 3-Step Legal Settlement & Grant Roadmap

Immigration Eligibility Audit

Identify the correct visa pathway – Digital Nomad, Entrepreneur, Job Seeker, or Study-to-Work – matched precisely to your professional profile and financial standing.

Municipal Selection & Compliance

Verify your prospective address falls within designated grant-eligible postal codes before signing any lease or property purchase agreement.

Dossier Submission & Grant Filing

Prepare a complete legal dossier – proof of income, criminal background checks, tax registrations, and local registration forms – to ensure seamless grant disbursement.

Key Takeaways

What Every Applicant Must Know

→ Substantial Incentives Exist

European regions are actively paying between €6,000 and €30,000+ to attract long-term residents and remote talent.

→ Visa First, Grant Second

A relocation grant is entirely separate from an entry visa. Legal residency status must be secured before any financial payout is released.

→ Location Precision Matters

Grants are restricted to specific municipalities and rural zones. Expert verification ensures you don't settle in an ineligible address.

→ Multiple Visa Pathways Available

Options exist for remote workers, entrepreneurs, professionals, and families via Digital Nomad, D2, and Non-Lucrative Residence Visas.
